DOWN & DELIRIOUS IN MEXICO CITY | Kirkus Reviews

Yet to his credit, Hernandez has tapped a previously unexplored vein with his travel memoir, Down and Delirious in Mexico City (The Aztec Metropolis in the Twenty-First Century) published by Scribner. The result is an exhilarating ride through the city and its unique "tribes."

Down and Delirious in Mexico City: Memoir by Daniel ...

Down and Delirious in Mexico City describes a city that is, at the same time, dangerous, exciting, violent, modern, historical, spiritual and restless. Hernandez's background as a journalist serves him well here whether he's at a protest march in support of emos or randomly catching the daily flag ceremony that demands solemnity from the people passing through the Zócalo.

Daniel Hernandez's Down and Delirious in Mexico City charts the progress of a dark-skinned Chicano from San Diego who is Mexican enough to merit a passport, but who is also much more at ease, at least at first, on the UC Berkeley campus. After graduation, he determines to head south to reclaim his heritage, not to the Tijuana borderland so close to San Diego but to the country's bewildering capital.

MEXICO CITY, with some 20 million inhabitants, is the largest city in the Western Hemisphere. Enormous growth, raging crime, and tumultuous politics have also made it one of the most feared and misunderstood. Yet in the past decade, the city has become a hot spot for international business, fashion, and art, and a magnet for thrill-seeking expats from around the world.
